

Colorado College Announcement.

To the Editor of the News:

The second term of the academic year will begin Monday, January 8, 1877. The institutions of other states are so far off that if any considerable number of our young people are to enjoy the privileges of advanced education, these must be provided in our own midst. Colorado College is earnestly endeavoring to meet this demand by affording at present as full opportunities as possible for training in the higher branches of learning and by constant efforts to enlarge the scope of its labors and facilities, so that it may become equal to any demands that may be made upon it. The college had its origin, and is maintained in no narrow, exclusive or sectarian spirit. It believes most earnestly in that culture which is broadest and most liberal. It rests upon a basis upon which all can heartily co-operate. On its board of trustees are representatives of various denominations and those who belong to no denomination. It means to justify its existence by faithful efforts in the cause of higher education in Colorado and its adjacent territories. Any persons wishing to enter upon a course of higher studies, or upon a course preparatory to such studies, are invited to communicate with the undersigned, who will be pleased to answer any enquiries.

WINTHROP D. SHELDON,
Professor Colorado College, Colorado Springs.

Colorado College Announcement.

Winthrop D. Sheldon, Professor Colorado College, Colorado Springs.

Daily Rocky Mountain News (Denver, Colorado, Friday, December 22, 1876. (224 words)

Category: Letter to the editor

Gale Document Number:GT3011718433